

Common Goals, Different Backgrounds: A Students Perspective on Working Together

Hailey Crozier; Utah State University

Have you ever worked on a job which required several agencies and people from different backgrounds to come together? I would like to present a successful project in which people were able to put their differences behind them and get a job done! Many agencies were able to work together side by side with local ranchers and recreationists to accomplish stabilization of Brown Duck and Island reservoirs (a mitigation project associated with irrigation) located within “wilderness” area. I will provide my perspective (being an equipment operator in the background) as well as some of the technical background that had to be accomplished due to the uniqueness of this job being within “wilderness” area.

2009. 62nd Society for Range Management Annual Meeting. Paper No. 92-6.